Anencephaly is a serious birth defect in which a baby is born without parts of the brain and skull. In my literary journalism manuscript, I explore this unfortunate birth defect and incorporate narrative from my personal experience with it. I continue to explain what the causes and consequences of this defect are, and the juggle between school, work, and home life. I also discuss both the helpfulness and potential harm of the online support communities. I hope to bring about more awareness of this defect with this piece.
